About Me

Juan Manuel Guevara

Conductor | Double Bassist | Professor

Juan Manuel Guevara is a musician and conductor with a career shaped by Venezuela's renowned "El Sistema."

He has performed on world-class stages like Carnegie Hall, Berlin Philharmonie, and Amsterdam Concertgebouw, working with iconic conductors such as Gustavo Dudamel, Claudio Abbado, and Simon Rattle.

In Portugal, he has collaborated with top orchestras, including:

- Orquestra Sinfónica do Porto Casa da Música
- Orquestra Sinfónica Portuguesa
- Orquestra do Norte
- Orquestra de Câmara de Cascais e Oeiras

Juan studied conducting with Miguel Romea and Andrés Salado, leading to roles as Principal Conductor of the Zana Batuta Orchestra and Assistant Conductor for Mahler's Fourth Symphony with the Orquestra Sinfónica ESART.

Today, he balances performing, teaching, and conducting across Portugal and Spain.

Me as a Teacher

I believe music is more than just playing - it's about expression, discipline, and growth.

I focus on helping students build strong technical skills while fostering their confidence and creativity.

My goal is to inspire students to discover their own musical voice in a supportive and encouraging environment.

My Teaching Style

My teaching adapts to each student's needs, always starting with a solid technical foundation.

Once the basics are in place, I encourage students to take on new challenges, keeping the process engaging and rewarding.

I balance structure with creativity to ensure learning is both productive and enjoyable.
